

OPTICAL ABERRATION COMPENSATOR

Abstract

A color image is generated as a composite of images from different image modulators, each modulating a different color, and chromatic aberration of at least one optical element in the associated optical system is compensated by scaling or shifting images from different image modulators differently.